

Congressman Blumenauer visited Con-way Freight's Clackamas facilities on Friday to discuss freight movement, hauling and maintenance jobs, and cost savings through energy efficiency in trucking. Environmentally friendly technology on newer Con-way vehicles can actually improve air quality! As one employee noted, in smoggier metropolitan areas like Los Angeles, air running through newer engines comes out cleaner than the air taken in.

Con-way Freight distributes 1.8 Million pounds of commercial and industrial cargo daily from the Clackamas facility. "I'm glad to visit Con-way's facilities here at home and work with them in Washington DC," Blumenauer said. "This company understands that improving freight goes hand in hand with improving the transportation options for all Americans." Con-Way is a $5 billion diversified freight company that has 300 centers throughout the U.S.
